College Dating Made Healthy: How to Build Trust, Strengthen Respect & Improve Communication in Campus Relationships

Dating in college doesn't come with a handbook—but it should. Between hookup culture, social pressure, blurred boundaries, and constant communication through texts and social media, many college students struggle to tell the difference between healthy relationships and toxic dynamics. College Dating Made Healthy is the practical, no-judgment guide students wish they had before their first serious relationship.

Written by National Campus Speaker of the Year, award-winning author, and host of the globally ranked Healing From Emotional Abuse podcast, Marissa F. Cohen breaks down the three non-negotiable pillars of healthy relationships—Respect, Trust, and Communication—in a way that's clear, relatable, and easy to apply to real college life.

This book goes beyond clichés and red flags lists. Instead, it teaches students how healthy relationships actually work—from setting boundaries and navigating consent, to resolving conflict without manipulation, pressure, or guilt.

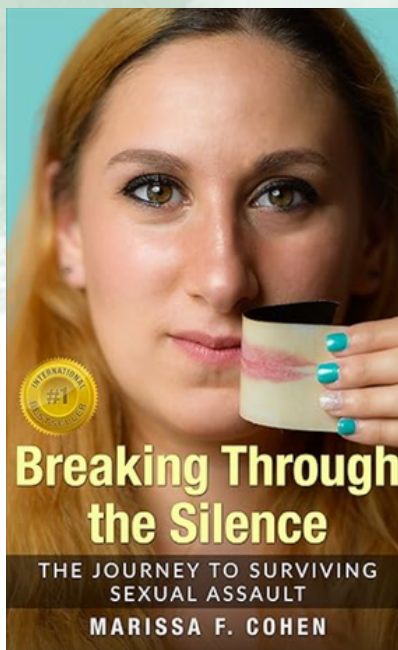

Inside this book, you'll learn how to:

- ✓ Build trust through consistency, accountability, and honesty
- ✓ Set and respect boundaries without fear, guilt, or conflict
- ✓ Communicate needs clearly without arguments or defensiveness
- ✓ Navigate consent, pressure, and “gray area” situations safely
- ✓ Identify unhealthy patterns before they become toxic
- ✓ Handle conflict as teammates instead of opponents
- ✓ Strengthen emotional safety in dating, friendships, and partnerships

Healing From Emotional Abuse: 365 Ways to Start Your Healing Journey

Healing From Emotional Abuse: 365 Ways to Start Your Healing Journey helps us to discover the many ways in which trauma has changed us. But not just that. As survivors of emotional abuse, narcissism, sexual assault, and domestic violence of all kinds, we lose our identities. We don't know who we are anymore, after the abuse is over. And the thought of not having that basic understanding of ourselves throws us for a loop.
